OSKLEN FALL WINTER 2015

Oskar Metsavaht's Winter 2015 collection is inspired by the outfit of a couple who sets off on a global journey through forests, cities, snow mountains and even to imaginary destinations. A new interpretation of what would be the set of products that couple takes with them in its suitcases triggered the creative process of that collection.

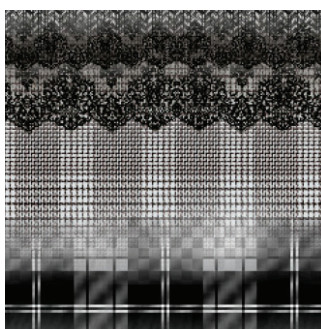

The ideas were evolving in the same way as we do when we are exposed to new experiences when we travel. As we are exposed to them, we transform ourselves. We incorporate elements into our own image that decode that experience, we gather not only memories along the way, but also objects and accessories that mingle with the pieces that we have originally brought with us and make us come back in a different way.

Iconic and classic pieces of the brand were deconstructed and reconstructed for that collection, which reinterprets pieces such as sweatshirts, trench coats, trousers and military jackets, fur coats, jeans, and heavier wool items.

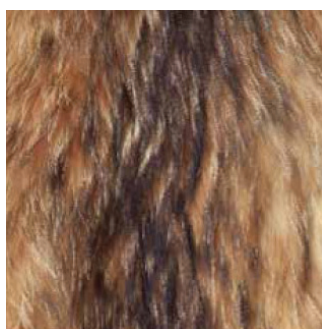

Materials: silk, wool, sweatshirt, and dubbed mesh.

Prints: road, geodesic, fox, checked, patchwork, and astro.

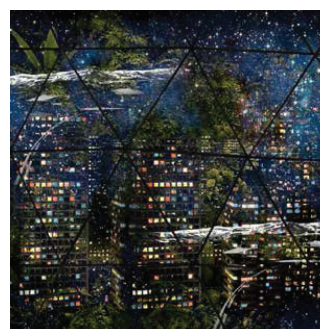

Colors: military green, red, bordeaux, black, off white, navy blue, chino, and ecru.
